About the Book

Garfield Goes Bananas is the 44th book in the Garfield comic strip series. It was written and illustrated by Jim Davis, and published by Paws, Inc. in 1998. The book collects 120 comic strips from the Garfield newspaper strip that were originally published between 1996 and 1998.

The book is divided into four chapters, each of which focuses on a different aspect of Garfield's life. The first chapter, "Garfield's World," features strips that explore Garfield's relationship with his owner, Jon Arbuckle; his love of lasagna; and his hatred of Mondays. The second chapter, "Garfield's Friends," features strips that focus on Garfield's relationships with his fellow comic strip characters, such as Odie the dog, Nermal the kitten, and Arlene the mouse. The third chapter, "Garfield's Adventures," features strips that follow Garfield on his various misadventures, such as his attempts to catch birds, his battles with spiders, and his encounters with the local wildlife.

The fourth and final chapter of the book, "Garfield's Wisdom," features strips that offer Garfield's unique perspective on life. These strips are often filled with humor and insight, and they remind readers that even the most grumpy cat can have something valuable to say.
