Bill Wallace is a cowboy journalist who has spent his life writing about the American West. He is a former rodeo champion and a recipient of the National Cowboy Hall of Fame's Wrangler Award. In his memoir, Making Circles, Wallace tells the story of his life and career, from his early days on the ranch to his rise to prominence as a writer and broadcaster.

Wallace was born in Oklahoma in 1942. He grew up on a ranch and learned the cowboy trade from his father. He began writing about rodeo in the early 1960s, and his work quickly gained attention for its accuracy and insight. In 1972, he was hired by CBS News to cover rodeo and other Western sports. He went on to become one of the most respected journalists in the field.

Making Circles is a fascinating and inspiring account of Wallace's life and career. It is a must-read for anyone interested in the American West, rodeo, or journalism.
